

NEXORA SYSTEMS
Company Policy Handbook
Synthetic 200-Page RAG Test Corpus

Document ID: NX-POL-200
Version: 1.0
Effective Date: January 1, 2026
Synthetic data for RAG evaluation only.

POL-001 — Work From Home / Hybrid Work

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

WFH rule: Eligible employees may work remotely up to three scheduled days per workweek with manager approval. The schedule must be recorded in the team calendar.

POL-001 — Work From Home / Hybrid Work

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

WFH hours: Remote employees remain available during standard core hours of 10:00 AM–4:00 PM local time unless a documented flexible schedule applies.

POL-001 — Work From Home / Hybrid Work

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-001 — Work From Home / Hybrid Work

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-001 — Work From Home / Hybrid Work

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for work from home / hybrid work. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-002 — Working Hours & Attendance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-002 — Working Hours & Attendance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-002 — Working Hours & Attendance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-002 — Working Hours & Attendance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-002 — Working Hours & Attendance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for working hours & attendance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-003 — Leave & Holidays

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-003 — Leave & Holidays

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-003 — Leave & Holidays

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-003 — Leave & Holidays

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-003 — Leave & Holidays

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for leave & holidays. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-004 — Compensation & Benefits

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-004 — Compensation & Benefits

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-004 — Compensation & Benefits

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-004 — Compensation & Benefits

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-004 — Compensation & Benefits

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for compensation & benefits. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-005 — Health Insurance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-005 — Health Insurance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-005 — Health Insurance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-005 — Health Insurance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-005 — Health Insurance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for health insurance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-006 — IT & Device Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-006 — IT & Device Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-006 — IT & Device Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-006 — IT & Device Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-006 — IT & Device Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for it & device usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-007 — Information Security

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-007 — Information Security

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-007 — Information Security

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-007 — Information Security

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-007 — Information Security

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for information security. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-008 — Password & Authentication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-008 — Password & Authentication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-008 — Password & Authentication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-008 — Password & Authentication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-008 — Password & Authentication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for password & authentication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-009 — Data Privacy

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-009 — Data Privacy

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-009 — Data Privacy

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-009 — Data Privacy

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-009 — Data Privacy

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data privacy. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-010 — Email & Communication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-010 — Email & Communication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-010 — Email & Communication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-010 — Email & Communication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-010 — Email & Communication

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for email & communication. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-011 — Internet Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-011 — Internet Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-011 — Internet Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-011 — Internet Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-011 — Internet Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internet usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-012 — Employee Code of Conduct

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-012 — Employee Code of Conduct

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-012 — Employee Code of Conduct

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-012 — Employee Code of Conduct

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-012 — Employee Code of Conduct

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for employee code of conduct. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-013 — Anti-Harassment

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-013 — Anti-Harassment

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-013 — Anti-Harassment

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-013 — Anti-Harassment

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-013 — Anti-Harassment

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for anti-harassment. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-014 — Equal Employment Opportunity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-014 — Equal Employment Opportunity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-014 — Equal Employment Opportunity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-014 — Equal Employment Opportunity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-014 — Equal Employment Opportunity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for equal employment opportunity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-015 — Parental Leave

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-015 — Parental Leave

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-015 — Parental Leave

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-015 — Parental Leave

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-015 — Parental Leave

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for parental leave. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-016 — Business Travel

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-016 — Business Travel

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-016 — Business Travel

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-016 — Business Travel

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-016 — Business Travel

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business travel. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-017 — Office Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-017 — Office Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-017 — Office Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-017 — Office Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-017 — Office Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for office access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-018 — Remote Access / VPN

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

VPN rule: WFH approval does not authorize restricted-system access without the approved VPN or zero-trust mechanism.

POL-018 — Remote Access / VPN

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-018 — Remote Access / VPN

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-018 — Remote Access / VPN

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-018 — Remote Access / VPN

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for remote access / vpn. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-019 — BYOD

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

BYOD rule: Personal devices may not be used for restricted company data unless explicitly enrolled and approved under the BYOD controls.

POL-019 — BYOD

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-019 — BYOD

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-019 — BYOD

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-019 — BYOD

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for byod. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-020 — AI Tool Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

AI rule: Confidential, customer-restricted, credential, secret, or personal data must not be entered into public generative-AI services unless explicitly approved.

POL-020 — AI Tool Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-020 — AI Tool Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-020 — AI Tool Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-020 — AI Tool Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for ai tool usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-021 — Performance Reviews

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-021 — Performance Reviews

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-021 — Performance Reviews

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-021 — Performance Reviews

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-021 — Performance Reviews

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for performance reviews. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-022 — Learning & Development

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-022 — Learning & Development

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-022 — Learning & Development

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-022 — Learning & Development

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-022 — Learning & Development

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for learning & development. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-023 — Promotion

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-023 — Promotion

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-023 — Promotion

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-023 — Promotion

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-023 — Promotion

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for promotion. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-024 — Expenses & Reimbursement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-024 — Expenses & Reimbursement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-024 — Expenses & Reimbursement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-024 — Expenses & Reimbursement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-024 — Expenses & Reimbursement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for expenses & reimbursement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-025 — Procurement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-025 — Procurement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-025 — Procurement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-025 — Procurement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-025 — Procurement

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for procurement. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-026 — Asset Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-026 — Asset Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-026 — Asset Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-026 — Asset Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-026 — Asset Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for asset management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-027 — Incident Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-027 — Incident Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-027 — Incident Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-027 — Incident Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-027 — Incident Management

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for incident management. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-028 — Business Continuity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-028 — Business Continuity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-028 — Business Continuity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-028 — Business Continuity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-028 — Business Continuity

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for business continuity. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-029 — Data Retention

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-029 — Data Retention

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-029 — Data Retention

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-029 — Data Retention

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-029 — Data Retention

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for data retention. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-030 — Confidential Information

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-030 — Confidential Information

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-030 — Confidential Information

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-030 — Confidential Information

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-030 — Confidential Information

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for confidential information. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-031 — Resignation & Offboarding

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-031 — Resignation & Offboarding

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-031 — Resignation & Offboarding

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-031 — Resignation & Offboarding

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-031 — Resignation & Offboarding

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for resignation & offboarding. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-032 — Internal Transfers

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-032 — Internal Transfers

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-032 — Internal Transfers

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-032 — Internal Transfers

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-032 — Internal Transfers

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for internal transfers. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-033 — Software Development Policies

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-033 — Software Development Policies

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-033 — Software Development Policies

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-033 — Software Development Policies

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-033 — Software Development Policies

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for software development policies. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-034 — Cloud Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-034 — Cloud Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-034 — Cloud Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-034 — Cloud Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-034 — Cloud Usage

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for cloud usage. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-035 — Database Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-035 — Database Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-035 — Database Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-035 — Database Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-035 — Database Access

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for database access. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-036 — Audit & Compliance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 1 of 5

Purpose and Scope

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-036 — Audit & Compliance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 2 of 5

Eligibility and Requirements

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-036 — Audit & Compliance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 3 of 5

Roles, Approval and Exceptions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-036 — Audit & Compliance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 4 of 5

Security, Records and Audit

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

POL-036 — Audit & Compliance

Policy Owner: Corporate Operations | Version 1.0 | Effective 2026-01-01 | Section 5 of 5

Frequently Asked Questions

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

This synthetic policy establishes standardized requirements for audit & compliance. Employees and contractors must follow the applicable process, obtain approvals where required, and maintain records in the approved system. Managers are responsible for operational decisions and the policy owner is responsible for interpretation. If another policy imposes a stricter security, privacy, legal, customer, or financial requirement, the stricter requirement applies unless an approved exception states otherwise. Requests, approvals, exceptions, and supporting evidence must be retained according to the records policy.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 01

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 02

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 03

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 04

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 05

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 06

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 07

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 08

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 09

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 10

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 11

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 12

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 13

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 14

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 15

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 16

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 17

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 18

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 19

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 20

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 21

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 22

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 23

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.

RAG Evaluation Appendix 24

Cross-policy scenarios and retrieval questions

Question: How many days per week can an eligible employee work from home?

Question: What are the standard core availability hours?

Question: Does WFH approval allow restricted access without VPN?

Question: Can personal devices access restricted data?

Question: Can customer personal data be entered into public AI tools?

Question: Who approves policy exceptions?

Question: Where should approvals be recorded?

Question: What happens when two policies conflict?

Scenario: A remote employee receives approval to work from home, uses a company-managed device, remains available during core hours, and connects to restricted applications through the approved secure access mechanism. The WFH, attendance, asset, and remote-access policies apply together.